A Visitor in Paris

Greg is American, but he works in Paris, France. Last month, his sister, Jessica, visited him in Paris. Before Jessica arrived, Greg planned to take her to some (34) places. For example, he wanted to show her the Eiffel Tower and the Louvre Museum. But when Greg met Jessica at the airport, she said that she was not interested in sightseeing. Instead, she wanted to learn how to make French food.

That night, Greg searched on the Internet for some cooking classes, and he found a French baking class. Greg and Jessica decided to (35) it. The class lasted for two days, and both Greg and Jessica enjoyed it. In fact, Greg liked the class so much that he decided to take more French cooking classes after Jessica left.

The Phonograph

Until about 200 years ago, there was no recorded sound. When people wanted to hear music, they could not just listen to CDs. Instead, they needed someone to (36) it for them. However, in the 1800s, some people began trying to make machines that could record sounds. Then, in 1877, Thomas Edison invented a machine called the phonograph that could do this.

The phonograph recorded sounds onto a kind of tube called a cylinder, which was made from a very thin sheet of metal. The machine recorded the sound by cutting small lines into the cylinder, but the thin metal was not very strong. Because of this, each recording could only be listened to (37). To solve this problem, Edison began making cylinders out of wax.* These were stronger, so people could listen to a recording many times before the cylinders broke.

However, because of the cylinders' shape, it was difficult to make copies of recordings. A different inventor, Emile Berliner, (38) this situation. In 1887, Berliner invented a new machine called the gramophone, which used flat discs instead of cylinders. Because the discs were flat, it was much easier to make copies of them. Also, these discs could hold longer recordings. Soon, people began recording music onto the discs, and they could listen to it whenever they wanted.

From: Katie Warner <k-warner@trcollege.edu>
To: Charlie Meyer <meyercharles@landis.edu>
Date: January 26, 2014
Subject: Special exhibition

Dear Charlie,

How are you? It's been a long time since I last heard from you. I thought we would see each other a lot in the fall because we go to college in the same city, but I guess we've both been too busy studying. I'm really enjoying college, but I miss our high school days together, especially Mr. West's art class!

Yesterday, I saw a poster for a special exhibition at the City Art Museum. Since you're studying art history like I am, I thought it would be nice to go together. The exhibition is showing art by an American artist, Max Baker, who is known for his paintings of Central City in the early 1990s. I'm mostly interested in Asian art, but I'd like to go anyway.

If you're interested, we could meet in front of the museum around 10 a.m. on Sunday. We'd have two or three hours to look at the paintings, and then we could go somewhere for lunch. How about the sandwich shop on Fifth Street? I also hope you can tell me some news about our friends from high school. Let me know if this sounds like a good plan.

Hoping to see you,

Katie

(39) Charlie and Katie

- 1 are friends from high school.
- 2 will start studying at the same college.
- 3 have been too busy to study very much.
- 4 usually see each other every week.

(40) Why does Katie suggest she and Charlie go to the exhibition?

- 1 She wants to show Charlie some Asian art.
- 2 They are both studying art history.
- 3 The paintings are by her favorite artist.
- 4 Max Baker will give a speech there.

(41) What is one thing Katie hopes Charlie will do?

- 1 Pick her up in his car on Sunday.
- 2 Recommend a good restaurant.
- 3 Show her around the museum.
- 4 Tell her about their friends.

Plane Trees

The French countryside is known for the beautiful long lines of trees that grow along the sides of roads and rivers. Most of these trees are a kind called plane trees. These trees have been a part of the French countryside for centuries. They were first planted for wood and to give shade along the roads. Now, however, these trees are in danger.

One danger for the trees is a disease that was accidentally brought to France from America by soldiers during World War II. Since then, thousands of plane trees along the Canal du Midi, a man-made river built in the 17th century, have caught this disease. These trees are being cut down to keep the disease from spreading, but this is bad for the river because the roots of the trees are needed to protect the walls of the river. New trees are being planted, but they will take many years to grow.

Another danger, however, comes from people who want to cut them down for other reasons. One reason they want to do this is that a large number of people die in accidents in which cars hit the plane trees. As a result, some trees have been cut down to try to make roads safer. For example, a group of motorcycle riders cut down about 100 of the trees after a rider died in an accident. Even the French Minister of Agriculture has said that all the trees should be cut down.

However, some people disagree. They say that the trees are not the problem. These people believe that such accidents are caused by people driving too fast. Chantal Fauché, a French woman who is trying to save the trees, says that even if the trees are removed, bad drivers will continue to have accidents. Still, the number of these trees has gone down from around 3 million to 250,000 over the last 100 years.

(42) The plane trees in France

- 1 are in danger because too many people use them for wood.
- 2 sometimes grow in the middle of roads.
- 3 have been grown in the countryside for hundreds of years.
- 4 were planted to make rivers look beautiful.

(43) What happened in France during World War II?

- 1 Many plane trees were cut down to make room for buildings.
- 2 American soldiers accidentally destroyed an important road.
- 3 A disease that affects plane trees was brought from America.
- 4 A man-made river was built by the French government.

(44) Why do some people think that plane trees are dangerous?

- 1 The Minister of Agriculture says the trees make it hard for drivers to see.
- 2 The trees sometimes fall onto roads and cause car accidents.
- 3 A group of motorcycle riders died while cutting some trees down.
- 4 A lot of people have died after hitting the trees while driving.

(45) Chantal Fauché

- 1 thinks that removing plane trees does not help road safety.
- 2 believes that better roads will help people go to places faster.
- 3 wants to reduce the number of plane trees in France to 250,000.
- 4 says that it can take over 100 years for a new plane tree to grow.
