Art Online

The Internet has had a big effect on our daily lives in many ways. For example, many people do their shopping and banking online. Recently, however, people have also begun to use the Internet to enjoy famous works of art that are in museums far away. Google and a museum in Spain called the Prado worked together on a project that lets people all over the world look at the museum's paintings using the Internet. Because of this project, many people now have the chance to see these works of art without (36).

First, experts at the Prado used special cameras to take more than 8,200 pictures of the paintings. After the pictures were taken, Google put them onto a special website. That way, anyone can view the images for free. The pictures that the cameras took are very high quality, and people can zoom in to see very small details in the paintings. This means that we can look at them (37) online than we can in the museum.

Then, in 2011, Google started a new project called the Google Art Project. In this, Google worked with 17 famous museums around the world. A camera was carried around the museums, and pictures were taken of the inside of the buildings as well as the art. This project allows Internet users to "walk" through the halls of the museums and look at art as if they were taking a tour. Just like the project with the Prado museum, users do not have to (38). Thanks to these projects, many people can now "visit" some of the world's greatest museums for free.

From: Dana Kennedy <dk5555@mymail.com>
To: Michael Brown <mbrown@cookmore.com>
Date: October 12, 2014
Subject: New kitchen

Dear Michael,

How are you, little brother? It's been over a month since you moved into your new house. Are you looking forward to having barbecues in your new backyard? I spoke to Mom and Dad on the phone last weekend. I think they've been lonely since you and I moved away to the city for work. We should try to visit them for Christmas this year.

Thanks for your advice about what changes my husband and I should make to our kitchen. Since you're a professional chef, we knew you would be the best person to ask. We're using your idea of adding more lights over the stove. John wants to get a bigger sink, and I want to move the refrigerator to a better spot. The kitchen was really inconvenient, and your ideas have been very helpful.

The kitchen will be finished by the end of the month, and we want to invite you and your family to come over for a dinner party. Do you think you'll have some free time in November? If you let me know your schedule, we can try to plan something. Be sure to say hello to your wife for me, and we're looking forward to your first barbecue!

Your sister,
Dana

Shoe Story

Many people around the world have been wearing shoes for most of their lives. In fact, many people are so used to wearing shoes that they cannot easily walk around outside without them. However, many thousands of years ago, there were no shoes. Researchers around the world have become interested in knowing when shoes were invented, and they have been learning more and more about the history of shoes.

Scientists think that humans started wearing clothes over 100,000 years ago. However, they say that we did not start wearing shoes until much later. Scientists compared the foot bones of people who wear shoes with those of people who do not. They found that people who wear shoes have smaller and weaker foot bones. The oldest foot bones like this come from people who lived 40,000 years ago in Asia.

However, scientists do not know what kind of shoes these people wore because none of their shoes have been found. In fact, the oldest shoes ever found are from about 10,000 years ago. These shoes were made from rope, and they were found in Oregon, in the United States. More recently, a small leather shoe from 5,500 years ago was found in Europe. Scientists think that this kind of shoe was made to protect people's feet from both the hard ground and the cold.

Some people, however, think that people in ancient cultures did not wear shoes only for protection. It is thought that they also cared about how their shoes looked. Manolo Blahnik, a famous shoe designer, looked at the leather shoe found in Europe. He thinks that different groups of ancient people probably had different styles of shoes. This might have made it easier for them to tell whether or not a person belonged to the same group as them. In this way, it seems that style might have also been important to ancient cultures.

- (42) What is true about many people in the world today?
- 1 They cannot get shoes that are big enough to fit their feet.
 - 2 They are not interested in learning about the history of shoes.
 - 3 They have trouble walking around outside without shoes.
 - 4 They spend thousands of dollars on shoes in their lifetimes.
- (43) Scientists say that people
- 1 should start wearing shoes at an older age than they do now.
 - 2 walked from Asia to North America 40,000 years ago.
 - 3 created clothes 100,000 years earlier than they had thought.
 - 4 started wearing clothing before they started wearing shoes.
- (44) The shoe found in Europe was
- 1 probably difficult to wear for a long time.
 - 2 probably made to keep the feet safe and warm.
 - 3 worn at least 10,000 years ago.
 - 4 made of many small pieces of rope.
- (45) What does Manolo Blahnik think about ancient people?
- 1 Different groups of them wore different kinds of shoes.
 - 2 Some groups wore shoes more often than others.
 - 3 Leather shoes were not very important for them.
 - 4 They did not care much about the appearance of their shoes.
