Subject: Did you forget something?

---

Hi Sara!

I enjoyed playing tennis with you at the park today. Thanks for coming to my house after the game. My mother was happy to finally meet you. Guess what? I found your tennis racket after you went home! It was in my bedroom. I can bring it next week when we play tennis again. Do you need it before then?

See you soon,

Abby

Hi Abby!

Thanks so much for your e-mail. When I got home, I didn't have my racket. I thought I left it at the park. I was going to go back there to look for it, but luckily I checked my e-mail first. My dad gets very angry when I forget things. Last month, I couldn't find my wallet. My aunt found it on her sofa. I need to be more careful. Actually, I'll need my racket before next week. My dad wants to play tennis with me on Sunday morning, so can I get my racket from you before then? Would you like to go and see a movie on Saturday afternoon? My mom said you can come here for dinner on Saturday night, too. If you aren't free on Saturday, I can stop at your house to pick up the racket on Thursday or Friday after school.

Thanks!

Sara

England's Drink

England's most popular drink is tea. But people in England started drinking tea thousands of years later than people in China. How did a drink from China become so popular in England?

People in China started drinking tea about 5,000 years ago. Tea was first brought to Europe by some Portuguese* people around 1560. After that, Dutch* people started bringing tea to Europe, too. In 1662, the King of England married a woman who came from Portugal. The new queen loved to drink tea. She started drinking tea in London, so many rich people began to drink it, too. In 1700, more than 500 coffee shops in London sold tea.

By 1750, tea was the most popular drink in England. There was a big British company called the East India Company. The company brought tea from China to England. It was the only company that could sell tea in England. Because of this, tea was very expensive. Only rich people could drink it. Rich women had special parties to drink it with their friends. But everyone else wanted to drink tea, too. They started buying it secretly* from other places. Then, tea prices became cheaper, and everyone was happy.

People in England like drinking tea with breakfast. Thanks to Anna Russell, a friend of the queen, afternoon tea is also popular. Around 1840, she thought of an idea. English people had late dinners. She was always hungry during the day, so she started having tea and snacks in the afternoon. Now, afternoon tea is a famous English tradition.
