I don't entirely agree. There are many advantages and disadvantages to both living far from home and to living with one's parents while in college. Neither is clearly better.

The advantage of living far away from home is that a person can learn to be independent. Even with the best of intentions, parents can be over-bearing and controlling. Parents often interject into their children's activities, their socialization and their relationships and often just issue orders rather than discussing things rationally. With such an influence in a person's life, it is difficult for one to become an adult.

Also, people continue to rely on their parents to do basic everyday tasks for them as long as they can and will not learn to do them on their own. It can be difficult to learn these things later.

However, there are many reasons why living at home is better. It is cheaper for the whole family to live together than have one live in another home. In order to afford one's own home, one will need to work in addition to going to college resulting in one being unable to focus on one's school work and building relationships. Also, it is easier for one to deal with occasional emergencies if their families are not far.

In conclusion, I believe that each individual needs to decide which is better for themselves. Likely the best solution is something in between these two extremes for example living independently within the same city as the parents. (248 Words)
