

Type B 日本語訳なし スマホの方は横にご覧下さい。

3[A] Woodrow Wilson & the League of Nations eTOC G1 Chobun TypeB G1 12-1

In January 1918, as World War I raged across Europe, U.S. President Woodrow Wilson stood before Congress and laid out his vision for achieving a lasting international peace once hostilities ended. In this now famous Fourteen Point speech, Wilson set out to end what he saw as the secretive, self-serving diplomacy practiced by the dominant European powers. A high-minded idealist, Wilson believed the war was a catastrophic result of such behind-the-scenes, dishonest dealings. He envisioned a more democratic, stable world order, in which not only would the interests of smaller countries be represented, but open diplomatic proceedings would make nations accountable for their actions. The cornerstone of Wilson's plans was his proposal for an international body that would enable nations to settle their disputes through arbitration instead of military force. This organization should afford, he declared, "mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small states alike." At Wilson's urging, the victorious European powers incorporated this idea into the Treaty of Versailles that ended World War I, and in 1919, the League of Nations was established with 44 countries as members.

USE & PRINTING outside of eTOC are strictly PROHIBITED.

(32) In the plans laid out in his Fourteen Points speech, Woodrow Wilson proposed that

1. powerful nations create an organization to monitor the affairs of less powerful nations so that they could not threaten the progress of democracy.
2. the United States cease relying on secret negotiations and agreements as its main diplomatic tool for dealing with the leading European nations.
3. a transparent system of international diplomacy be put in place to prevent conflicts and ensure all nations have the right to govern themselves.
4. nations that win conflicts should guarantee to hold peace negotiations in public forums so that defeated nations are sure to be treated fairly

Further Questions

1) What did Woodrow Wilson do in January 1918?

He laid out his vision for achieving lasting international peace once hostilities ended.

2) What did Wilson believe the war was a result of?

He believed the war was the result of behind-the-scenes dishonest dealings.

3) How many countries joined the League of Nations?

The League of Nations was established with 44 countries as members.

The United States, however, was not among them. Many U.S. politicians were concerned about the type of overseas commitments membership might entail. Wilson's longtime political foe, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, headed the opposition. He argued that Article 10 of the league's covenant, which required

39. member nations to respond collectively to any act of aggression, ultimately
40. meant that the league could order the United States to provide military
41. support in the event of a dispute in another part of the world. In Lodge's view,
42. ceding any degree of control over the U.S. armed forces to an outside political
43. body posed an unacceptable threat to the nation's sovereignty. Wilson took
44. issue with the legal dictate, as the United States would be entitled to veto any
45. decision made by the organization. In exchange for Congress' support, Lodge
46. pushed for revision to the Article 10. Wilson, however, refused to sway from his
47. conviction that the country be morally bound to honor all of the covenant's
48. articles. Although Wilson ultimately failed to persuade Congress to ratify the
49. covenant, his wholehearted commitment to the League of Nations earned him
50. the Nobel Peace Prize in 1919.

51. (33) What stance did Henry Cabot Lodge take concerning Article 10 of the
52. covenant of the League of Nations?

53. 1. He rejected the prospect of the United States being forced to give up any of
54. its autonomy with regard to military affairs.

55. 2. He felt the league's right to veto military decisions made by the United
56. States would place unacceptable restrictions on the country's ability to defend
57. itself.

58. 3. He disagreed with Wilson's belief that in foreign policy, political and legal
59. considerations carried greater weight than matters of morality.

60. 4. He argued that the lack of a legal obligation for members to aid one
61. another militarily would put too much of the defense burden on the United
62. States.

Further Questions

63. 4) Why did the United States not join the League of Nations?

64. Many U.S. politicians were concerned about the type of overseas commitments
65. membership might entail.

66. 5) What happened to Woodrow Wilson in 1919?

67. His wholehearted commitment to the League of Nations earned him the Nobel
68. Peace

69. In the 1920s, many European powers used the league for their diplomatic
70. efforts, and it has some success in resolving small territorial disputes. Some
71. commentators, however, have characterized Wilson as backing a lost cause,
72. since the league's goal of ensuring that nations of the world could resolve their
73. differences through open diplomacy and mutual support ultimately proved to
74. be beyond its capabilities—as the onset of World War II made evident. One
75. could, though, make the case that he was politically ahead of his time. The
76. United Nations, which the United States agreed to join, was formed in place of
77. the league in 1946, and remains an important force for maintaining
78. international order to the present day.

79. (34) In the last paragraph, what does the author of the passage suggest

80. regarding Wilson's historical legacy?

81. 1. Although Wilson was commended for resolving territorial disputes during
82. his lifetime, the goals he set out are proving difficult to realize today.

83. 2. Although Wilson should be credited for creating the league, his refusal to
84. compromise meant the organization was less effective than it could have been.

85. 3. Although Wilson himself came to doubt the league's ability to promote
86. global security, many politicians today hold the league's objectives in high
87. regard.

88. 4. Although Wilson could not convince his country to join the league, his
89. vision has been realized by the creation of the body that took its place.

90. 6) Was the League of Nations initially successful?

91. It had some success in resolving small territorial disputes.

92. 7) Why have some commentators characterized Wilson as backing a lost cause?

93. The league's goal of ensuring that nations of the world could resolve their
94. difference through open diplomacy and mutual support ultimately proved to be
95. beyond its capabilities.

96. 8) What was formed in place of the league?

97. The United Nations was formed in place of the league in 1946.

98. 解答: (32) 3 (33) 1 (34) 4

Flex English
COMMUNITY

Not for use outside Flex English Community