8 _Although there may be a day when we can move away from petrol and diesel vehicles, I don't 9 think the technology is yet at the point where it would be feasible to do so. _Electrical vehicles 10 are good for regular driving around town, but they can only drive so far on a single charge.
11 When it comes to driving long distances, and especially when it comes to transporting goods,
12 petrol and diesel vehicles are still necessary. Without an extraordinary improvement in battery 13 technology, or the infrastructure for electrical vehicles to easily change batteries, this is not 14 going to change. _Furthermore, there are many classic vehicles and those who are reliant on 15 old vehicles and cannot afford to purchase a newer one. Forcing the removal of these vehicles
16 from the road would cause more problems for people than it would solve. _However, I am 17 entirely in favor of things being done to encourage people to purchase electrical vehicles and 18 the construction of infrastructure to make electrical vehicles more and more convenient and 19 easy to use. I believe it would be beneficial to use the government power to make electrical 20 vehicles the superior choice for customers. _So while I think that most people switching to 21 electrical vehicles would be better, petrol and diesel vehicles will still have a role to play in 22 transportation. And while subsidies towards electrical vehicles would be fine, a ban is too
23 sudden and harsh of a step to take in resolving the problem. 247words
