

1 To talk about liking or disliking something, you use verb + -ing with:

enjoy like love feel like fancy dislike detest hate mind

Do you enjoy skiing?

My cousin loves watching football on TV.

It's raining. I don't feel like going out, thanks.

I hated cooking when I was younger, but I liked eating out.

I fancy having a night out tonight. What about you?

Do you feel like coming to the cinema with us, Dave?

2 To invite someone to do something you can use:

a How about + -ing:

How about coming with us to the cinema?

How about having a meal with us later on in the week?

Note: You can use this structure with a noun:

How about another drink? How about a trip to London?

b Would you like + to:

Would you like to have something to eat?

Would you like to come to the party?

c You must + infinitive without to:

You really must have some more ice-cream.

You must visit us when you're in Hong Kong.

d To make an informal invitation to a friend, you can also use an imperative sentence, or, for extra emphasis, an imperative with do before the main verb:

A 'Have a sandwich.'

B 'I shouldn't.'

B 'Oh, do take one.'

A 'Come any time you like.'

B 'We'll try.'

A 'Yes, do come.'

A Rewrite these sentences using the right form of feel like:

e.g. Do you want to go out? Do you feel like going out?

- Do you want to see that new film? _____
- Don't you want to drive to the mountains this weekend? _____
- They wanted to get a video. _____
- It was a hot day and everybody wanted to go to the beach. _____
- I really don't want to go home now. It's early. _____
- Is there anything you particularly want to do? _____

Now rewrite the sentences using fancy.

B Look at the pictures of the people and the activities, then complete the sentences:

- I think the old man probably enjoys _____.
- It looks like the children don't like _____.
- The teenagers love _____.
- The old man probably dislikes _____.
- The teenagers hate _____.
- Frank and June love _____.
- The children like _____.

Now use the same verbs to say how you feel about the same activities.

C Rewrite these sentences using do:

e.g. Please have some more coffee. Do have some more coffee.

- You must come in and relax for a moment. _____
- You must let me buy you that picture. _____
- You must spend the weekend with us. _____
- Please write to me with your news. _____
- Please tell me when you're bored. _____

Now rewrite the sentences using How about ...+ -ing.
