Where's Sita?

Christine Hartzler

OXFORD

It's Tuesday afternoon. Belle and June are at the bookstore.

“Look!” says Belle. “Whose cell phone is that?”
“I don’t know,” says June.

“It’s Sita’s phone,” says Belle.
“Who’s she?” asks June.
“I don’t know,” says Belle.

“Are there any pictures?” asks Belle.
“Yes, there are!” says June.

“She was at the bakery this morning,” says June.

“Where’s the bakery?” asks Belle.
“It’s next to the clinic,” says June.

“Oh! Was Sita at the clinic?” asks Belle.
“Yes, she was,” says June. “See?”

Belle says, "The repair shop is next to the clinic.
Was Sita at the repair shop?"
"Yes, she was," says June.

“Hmm. Where is she now?” asks Belle.
“I don’t know,” says June. “Look! She was at the library, too.”

June says, "The library is between the repair shop and the bookstore! Maybe Sita was here."

Belle says, "You're right! But where is she now?"

"Excuse me," says a girl.

“Oh! It’s Sita!” say Belle and June.

“My cell phone!” says Sita. “Thanks for your help!”

“You’re welcome,” say Belle and June.
