■ Wear layers of clothing to go backpacking. ■ Put heavy items at the top of your backpack.

Mike O'Brien has been backpacking for over 20 years. He often spends up to 30 days at a time outdoors. In a recent interview with Outdoor Magazine , he offered some expert tips for new backpackers.
OM: MO: Backpacking and camping are my favorite things to do. It can get difficult at times, but I just love getting away from it all.
OM: MO: The two most important things to know are how to dress comfortably and how to pack your equipment well.	OM:
OM: MO: They need to understand the purpose of outdoor clothing. Clothes need to keep you warm in the cold, block the wind, and keep you dry in the rain. In hot environments, clothes should also protect you from the sun. You don't have control over the weather or the temperature. So you should dress in light layers of clothing. That way, if you are hot, you can take off clothes. And if you are cold, you can add clothes.	MO: Access and balance are the keys to packing well. First, access: Don't bury things you need – such as extra clothes, food, or water – at the bottom of your backpack. Second, balance: Remember, you're going to wear your backpack. It has to be balanced or you could fall over! Don't make your pack too heavy at the top or bottom. It's best to keep the heaviest items close to your back. OM: MO: Yes. Have fun! That's the only reason to do it!
